Leaves the smallest and most healthful residue in the food. Food prepared with Calumet Baking Powder is pure and healthful, and is free from Rochelle salts, alum, lime and ammonia.

Trust Baking Powders sell for 45 or 50 cents per pound and may be identified by this exorbitant price. They are a menace to public health, as food prepared from them contains large quantities of Rochelle salts, a dangerous cathartic drug.

WANT TO BUY ELECTRIC PLANT

Consolidated Water Power Company Would Furnish Electric Light for the City.

An unofficial offer has been made to the Electric & Water company by the Consolidated people to buy the plant of the Electric & Water company and furnish the people of Grand Rapids with light and power from the water power plant when it is completed, instead of from the steam plant as now.

During the past few days the Tribune man has interviewed several of the stockholders in the Electric & Water company to find how they stood on the matter and so far as can be ascertained they are all against making the sale. Most of them are of the opinion that the selling of the plant would be a step backward, and say that if at any time the stockholders of the Electric & Water company find that the plant costs so much to operate that it is found impracticable, then would be a good time to make the change.

Another thing that would stand in the way of the sale of the plant is the fact that when the franchise was granted the Electric & Water company it was with the understanding that the city of Grand Rapids held a perpetual option on the plant so that if at any time the debts of the plant were paid up the city could take possession and run it by paying up the per value of the stock outstanding. By virtue of this agreement or option the city would be made of the premises and it would be necessary to get a release from the city before anything could be done in the matter.

The Consolidated people have also suggested that they furnish the power to the Electric and Water people, the latter plant remaining in the same hands it now is. If the Consolidated people can furnish power cheaper than it can be generated by steam, it would be a good plan to get power from them.

It is probable that the matter will come up at the annual meeting of the Electric & Water company, which will be held in about four weeks.

A Coming Opportunity.

People who are in the habit of buying their clothes instead of having their wife make them of stealing them from the neighbor's clothesline, should bear in mind that the M. W. K. club are soon to have a sale that will prove a bonanza to all who have the good sense to patronize it. This sale will be of outgrown and cast off clothing, the magnitude of which can only be appreciated by attending and seeing with the eyes what will be offered to the public. The club have secured the store building next to the First National bank, and this will be fixed up and put into shape for the occasion. The date of the great sale is set for Saturday, October 10th, and men with large families will do well to bear the date in mind.

WATERWORKS MATTER SETTLED

City Council ratifies Agreement made by Attorneys.

At the meeting of the city council on Tuesday evening an agreement between the city and the Fidelity and Deposit company of Baltimore and the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry company was come to, and the matter is now entirely settled.

The United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry company and the Fidelity and Deposit company had started a suit against the city to recover the money they alleged to be due them, but this has all been abandoned.

The trouble grew out of the failure of S. I. Pope to fulfill his contract with the city, after which the Fidelity and Deposit company, who had gone on Mr. Pope's bond, stepped in and finished the work, encountering, however, a great many difficulties and incurring a great deal of expense above the price that Mr. Pope had agreed to do the work.

In the original contract there was a clause stating that the city should receive $20 for each day that the work was left incomplete after the time limit had expired. It was at this point that the hitch occurred. The Fidelity and Deposit company did not want to pay this forfeit, and in fact the company's representative, Mr. Kennard, stated when he first came here that the clause was a dead letter and was never paid any attention to by either party of a contract, and could not be collected by law.

In the settlement the companies accepted $7062.99 the city retaining $3530. This is considered a good settlement on the part of the city and means that a whole lot of money was saved to the taxpayers by compromising in this manner. D. D. Conway represented the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry company, while Mayor Wheelan looked after the city interests.

A resolution was introduced to the council by E. P. Arpin which provided for a committee being appointed to act as a business men's association in case such a committee is necessary in order to extend what assistance is possible in case of industries wishing to locate here. The Mayor appointed as such committee Messrs T. A. Taylor, E. P. Arpin and Geo. M. Hill.

The report of the committee that has been looking after the construction of the new bridge was read and accepted, the work having been done and finished up in a satisfactory manner.

Woman's Club Banquet.

The members of the Woman's club held their first meeting of the season on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. G. R. Gardner, at which there were sixteen members present. The principal feature of the first fall meeting each year is a banquet, which on this occasion was served by the hostess, Mrs. Gardner. The menu was as follows:

Salad	Soup	Wafers
Chicken Pie	Olives
Carrots	Creamed Potatoes
Ice Cream	Pickles	Bread
	Salted Nuts	Cake
	Coffee

The club will study Shakespeare the coming season. This is the second year the members have put in on this author, but they feel that the coming year will be even more beneficial to them than the last, and they start in the work with enthusiasm. At the first meeting four new applications for membership were received.

Increasing Their Capacity.

L. Starks & Co are building a room between the two parts of their potato warehouse, which will be used as a barge room when completed. The building will be much the same as when owned by McMillan Bros., who tore out the middle section when they sold the property to the Northwestern company, expecting that the building would have to be moved.

Mr. Starks was in the city last week and expressed the opinion at that time that he would also go into the handling of flour and feed at his place, but had not decided on the matter definitely. Very few potatoes have been coming in at this point so far this season, although buyers have been offering 40 cents per bushel. A great many of the tubers have rotted in the ground and the price will have to go high in order for the farmers to make anything off the crop.

Circuit Court in Session

Circuit Court convened in this city on Monday with Judge Charles M. Webb presiding. The calendar is a short one this year, there being only three criminal cases. The first of these, state vs Hubert J. Cordell, was taken up on Tuesday and is still in progress. The principal witness against Cordell is Wilkinson who was arrested in connection with Cordell and for the same crime. Wilkinson pleaded guilty to the charge of larceny from the person, and according to his own testimony has led a checkered career. The other two suits are the state against Edwin A. Whitney for assault with intent to do great bodily harm, and the state against Robert Pfund for bastardy.

A number of the other cases have been settled out of court.

Almost a Fire.

An alarm of fire brought out the people in a hurry on Friday afternoon and the first glance showed the fire to be on the roof of the new paper mill of the Consolidated Water Power company. The tar used in the roofing had caught fire from sparks from the pumping engine, but it was smothered before much damage was done by the men covering the blazing pitch with boards.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE.

Central Wisconsin Visited by a Tornado and Life and Property Lost.

Last Saturday was an eventful day for central Wisconsin. A heavy wind storm swept over the state, causing much damage to property and the loss of a number of lives.

There was every indication of a heavy windstorm at this point on that afternoon, but although the rain fell in torrents for a short time, the wind was not unusually strong and nothing was thought of the matter.

All about us, however, there was much damage, buildings being blown down and people killed in some places, while in others there was fierce winds without any unusual damage.

At Independence, west of here, the city hall, which was in course of construction, was blown down, only one wall of the brick structure being left standing. At this place there were two lives lost and the damage to property is estimated at $100,000. A letter received from Will Raath, who is working at Independence, stated that the man he was working for had had his house partly demolished, but that he had escaped without being hurt. A Green Bay & Western train was standing at the depot when the storm struck the city and the train was delayed about two and one-half hours, two of the box cars of the train being blown over and a lot of debris being piled upon the track.

At St. Charles, Minn., there were seven killed and a large number injured, besides which nearly the entire business district of the place was wrecked.

The storm also swept across the southern part of Portage county and caused considerable damage to property, tearing down telephone and telegraph wires and stopping communication with the damaged district. One person was killed at Green Lake and two at Plainfield, and at the latter place much stock was killed in the neighborhood and many buildings damaged. Five were reported killed near Sheridan, and one near Ashland.

Reports that have come in since the storm indicate that there were many places where there was slight damage done to buildings and trees, showing that the storm covered a large area.

More Railroad Talk

During the past two years nearly every large line in the country has, according to rumor, had an option on the Wisconsin Central, all of which have ended in wind.

The following from the Minneapolis Journal, claiming to be an interview with a prominent Canadian railroad man, may be of interest at this time, as it bears on the subject and explains many of the points not heretofore known on the subject:

"You have probably noticed that at the present time the Grand Trunk is putting a ferry service on Lake Michigan that will take the line into Milwaukee from Grand Haven. What do you think that is for? It will develop into a bid for the transportation of the flour and grain trade at a rate that none of its competitors will be able to touch. That is the real basis of this recurrent rumor that the Grand Trunk is going to buy the Wisconsin Central. Grand Trunk has not the slightest intention of buying Wisconsin Central, but those who know the plans of Grand Trunk to corral the trade of the twin cities toward the sea think that Grand Trunk will ultimately have to get a line into the twin cities. People who know all about Wisconsin Central know perfectly well why it is that this little road is doing such a tremendous lot of work on its direct line from Milwaukee and Manitowoc into the twin cities. It is because Wisconsin Central intends to have the shortest and most direct route from the twin cities to the points where Grand Trunk can pick up the traffic. If Wisconsin Central cannot make a rate that will fit in with the plans of Grand Trunk the Milwaukee probably can. Therefore, Wisconsin Central has got to have a short and low grade line even if it has to abandon many miles of right of way in order to cut across corners."

Man to Man

—Is the title of a new melodrama which will be seen at the Grand Opera House next Tuesday night, Oct. 13. In the field of dramatic amusement no class or plays has a stronger hold than melodrama; in fact that portion of plays which has a tendency to evoke thrills is always attractive, and especially is this true if they are brought about without exaggeration. It is claimed the story or plot of "Man to Man" is based on facts—telling of the abandonment of a little girl and the efforts of her friends and relatives to find her. The sensations include what is said to be one of the most thrilling explosions ever seen on any stage.

St. John's Church.

The usual services will be held next Sunday as follows: Celebration of Holy Eucharist, 7:30 and 10:30 a. m. Subjects of address at 10:30, "The communion of Saints, or the whole family in heaven and on earth." Church Sunday school 11:45. Evening prayer 7:30, with address on "Lord's prayer." All seats free. Visitors and strangers always welcome, and Fr. Corbett will be pleased to have their names and addresses that he may call upon them.

A. CORBETT, priest.

For Sale.

Eight second hand heating stoves; can be seen at the west side high school during or after school hours. BOARD OF EDUCATION.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS

A Good Concert.—The concert given at the Congregational church last Wednesday evening under the management of the ladies aid society was well attended and the entertainment was first class in every respect. The principal feature of the evening's program was the elocutionary work of Miss Maud Lizette Gilkey, whose efforts to please were eminently successful and who seemed to be appreciated by all. Miss Jessica McFarlin of Wausau also assisted as did James Kramer and Miss Helen Gilkey of this city. The society netted a comfortable sum for their efforts.

Under False Pretenses.—Thomas Gruboski walked into G. Bruderi's shoe store on Wednesday and asked for a pair of shoes, saying that Joe Monahan had sent him after them. Subsequent inquiry developed in fact that Mr. Monahan knew nothing of the matter and as the man had the shoes a warrant was sworn out for his arrest. He was found at Nekeosa and brought to this city and on Thursday was taken before Justice Cooper where he had his hearing. He was bound over to the circuit court and will probably be tried at the present term of court.

Electricians Organize.—A branch of the International Brotherhood of Electricians has been organized in this city, and the organization includes all of the electricians in this city and Marshfield. There are sixteen members of the order in the local organization and they hold meetings twice a month. The members report that it is not for the purpose of raising wages, but rather for the purpose of compelling workmen to serve a proper apprenticeship.

A Kitchen Shower.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Mullen was the scene of a lively assemblage on Thursday evening, the occasion being a kitchen shower for Miss Katie McCarthy, the shower having been gotten up by Mrs. Mullen and Mrs. James McCarthy. A very pleasant evening was spent and as a consequence of the gathering Miss McCarthy was the recipient of many useful and pretty presents.

Badly Scalded.—The ten year old daughter of Louis Schenck was badly scalded one day last week. The girl was sitting on the floor when a kettle of boiling water was knocked from the stove and spilled over her neck and back. It was thought at one time that she could not recover, but is somewhat better at this writing.

Will Open Store.—Will Lempe will open a grocery store in the Park & Peck building as soon as the present proprietors move into their new brick building. Mr. Lempe states that he has his stock all purchased and will be ready to start up shortly after the building is vacated.

A Good One.

—There will be a whole lot of realism at the Grand Opera House on next Friday night in the production of in Louisiana. This play is one of the South and has a pathetic heart interest, still a large portion of the interest is in the large settings and effects. The latter are reproductions from photographs of the Bayou Teche in the State of Louisiana, and the Rio Grande river and Brazos bottoms in Texas. One of the striking and thrilling effects is the head-on collision between the special and midnight express trains. The story is a startling one in its realism. The story is one also which has an interesting love romance and a happy ending. In fact the whole play is interesting and the four acts are realistic and sensational. The company is a powerful one. There are some neat and strong specialties during the action of the play.

Beell and Adamson Matched.

Another wrestling match has been arranged between Fred Beell of Marshfield and Ed. Adamson of St. Louis who will wrestle at Marshfield on Thursday evening, October 29th for $1,000 a side and the gate receipts. Beell and Adamson have already had five matches, Beell winning three and Adamson two, and as there are a number of people in Marshfield who think that Adamson is the better man, a great deal of interest is already being manifested in the match.

The match will be catch-as-catch-can, best three out of five, only pin falls to count. Beell will probably go onto the mat at about 165 pounds and Adamson a trifle lighter. The men have already posted $250 apiece with the cashier of the First National bank at Marshfield as a forfeit, the remainder of the one thousand dollars to be put up at the ringside.

Fire at Marshfield.

A grist mill belonging to Peter Rasmussen was burned at Marshfield on Tuesday evening, entailing considerable loss. The mill stands on the outskirts of town and none of the surrounding property was destroyed. A report was received in this city last night to the effect that a great fire was raging at Marshfield and there being no water available nothing could be done to stop the spread of the flames, but it seems that this story had originated in somebody's imagination.

First Congregational Church.

"The outcome of life's discipline" will be the subject next Sunday morning at the First Congregational church. All business men are specially invited to the evening service when Rev. Shaw will speak on "The Religion of Business."

Five Cents On the Belt Line

By GRACE POPE

Copyright, 1922, by Grace Pope

THE hot wave had struck Montreal, and Miss Sherbrooke was too warm to think.

She went out on her high bedroom balcony and looked into the night. Her father had gone to New York, and she was going to Newport tomorrow.

Mrs. Preslender was taking her off her father's hands for the season.

But tonight Miss Sherbrooke was making the decision of her life alone.

Two men were coming to her tomorrow for a "yes" or "no," and to save her life she could not choose between them.

It had to be "no" for one. But which one? She hated that it should be for either. She was sure that she loved them both, though much surer that they both loved her. Apart from the question of love there was nothing to consider. Both were clever, both were rich and both were good looking. Both presumably were good; at least she had heard nothing to the contrary. She knew very few women, and men were so noncommittal.

She was uneasily conscious of something her father always said. "You see all the good there is in a man and are as blind as a bat to the evil."

Was she really blind? Surely it did not matter. Her father knew them both and liked them.

She looked out at the waving tree tops. It was blowing somewhere in the open. The wind that saved Montreal every night was saving it now. She should be out. That was it. But where and how?

The long, low cry of a Belt line car came swelling up through the night. She gave one startled look in the direction of the sound and hesitated, but in that hesitation her mind was made up. She looked at her watch in the electric light. It was ten minutes to 11.

The horses were out of the question at that hour, and the servants were all asleep. She had never been out alone in a car at night in her life, and she did not like to go now. But she was not afraid and could break the conveniences on occasion with impunity. And she resolved to do it now.

Ten minutes later, in the most unobtrusive of dresses, she stepped off the pavement at Park avenue and walked out to meet a down car. There was one empty place on the second seat from the front at the inside, and she got into it with praiseworthy nimbleness. Then she settled herself back in the corner with a sigh of satisfaction and waited for the breeze. She knew at once almost by instinct that the man sitting next her was "nice," but in a moment she knew something else that sent her heart to her throat and kept it there, beating thickly.

Was this fate, or what? One of those other two men was sitting on the seat before her. When Miss Sherbrooke had collected her wits she knew that he had thought of that one she sighed and looked out into the night.

"Poor Swin!" she said to herself. "I believe that I love you best, but Jerry is stronger than you."

Jerry looked very strong at that moment and even a trifle sullen. Miss Sherbrooke began to wish he would smile. She wanted to see the adorable change that a smile always brought to his face.

"Tickets, please!"

The conductor was swinging down along the footboard, and Miss Sherbrooke discovered, with a shock of dismay, that the twenty-five cent piece she held never forgotten his cheery shout.

The lucky penny was an ordinary five cent piece with a small gold J on one side. A boy had thrown it to her on a snowball one dark night long ago as she was crying at her nursery window. She had never forgotten his cheery shout.

"Keep it till you want something awfully bad."

She might give the $5. For an instant she thought she would risk a loud toned parley. And then Jerry moved a little.

Miss Sherbrooke seized her penny and thrust it into the box in an agony of trepidation.

She saw her penny disappear without compunction and was only glad that the man did not see the gold letter. She was blankly unconscious that the keen eyes beside her had seen it with quick recognition.

"St. Catherine! 'Change cars east' and 'west'!"

There were movement and bustle on the front seat, and an enormously fat old woman stood up and dislodged two sleeping children. Clutching the younger by the arm, she signaled the retreating conductor and in doing so lurched down upon Jerry.

And then Miss Sherbrooke saw a change come over Jerry's face with a vengeance and heard four electrifying swear words. Her face and her heart hardened fiercely. She had a fine taste in swear words, and this outrageous travesty was unparagonable.

"And to a woman!" she said to herself. "Jerry Danberry, that is enough."

But more was to come very soon. A wave of people swept forward and up on the footboard. A humpback dressmaker girl jaunted fast against Jerry at the entrance and strove to pass with her parcel. There was room, and to spare, on the inside, but the poor little soul never reached it.

The deliberate resistance of Jerry's legs and the threat of his half closed eyes were too much for her, and she dropped back among the crowd and made room for stronger climbers.

The car ran down into the town and soon reached the low Craig street crossing. Some people crowded out of the front seat, and a man climbed slowly into their place.

Miss Sherbrooke's face barely hid a passion of welcome and relief. What a fool she had been to compare them! Fancy Swin speaking so to a woman! And she laughed in her heart as she watched him drop solidly in front of his rival.

His smooth, dark face was toward her, with the old deprecatory droop of the mouth and the brown eyes that hid half their challenge, and Miss Sherbrooke surrendered at discretion.

But there was no challenge biding there now. It was plain that he did not see her or even notice Jerry there before him, and Jerry's face was coolly contemptuous.

How white Swin looked and how tired! He had been playing too long in the sun again. As she watched him he leaned slowly outward to the shallow support of the side rail and rested against it inertly. The conductor swung up his box and waited, but he did not move.

"Tickets, please!" the man said again shortly. The brown eyes stared at him with an odd, helpless look, and Miss Sherbrooke grew seriously frightened. He had surely had a sunstroke or something, and Jerry was not stirring to help him. Indeed, it was only too plain that Jerry was rejoicing at his condition.

The conductor grew importunate and spoke loudly, and at last Swin said something inaudible.

"Can't find one?" the man exclaimed, smiling. "All right, I'll come back again then."

The car stopped, and in the hot silence a woman's voice sounded clearly: "I thought they were always quarrelsome or noisy."

And a man's laughing undertone answered:

"He is too far gone to be either."

Miss Sherbrooke gave one despairing look at the faces about her, and her own turned as white as her ribbon. The truth had come on her like a thunder-bolt. Swin was drunk. She did not move, nor did she faint, as the man beside her half expected, but set her teeth and sat watching the pitiful sight before her. The conductor came back and shook him, and at last Swin turned his head slowly.

"Put in 5 cents," said the man. A puzzled frown went over the smooth forehead, but the right hand went mechanically to his pocket.

"Five cents or a ticket?" The hand reappeared with a miscellaneous handful, and among it a bit of blue paper. Slowly and painfully, as though he were working in a dream, Swin fished this out from the rest and held it out. Miss Sherbrooke recognized it at a glance, and she knew that Jerry did the same. It was an amateur blue print of herself. The conductor put it back with a grin and selected 5 cents apologetically. And then Miss Sherbrooke saw Jerry's adorable smile.

The car swung round into Ankerst street, and Swin's heavy body swayed outward. Two girls near the front screamed and giggled, and an old lady clutched in the air.

"Let him fall!" cried Miss Sherbrooke in her heart, but her rage died out slowly in horror. Must she see his white face on the rails in that rabbit warren darkness?

Swin's face!

A rush of pity almost choked her. It was only a boy. After all he was only a boy, and Jerry would smile again when he saw him fall. She shut her teeth tighter and waited.

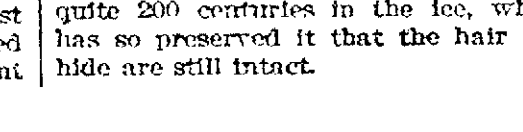

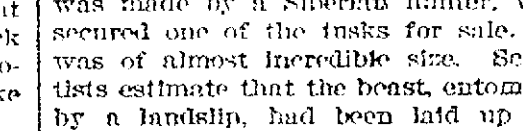

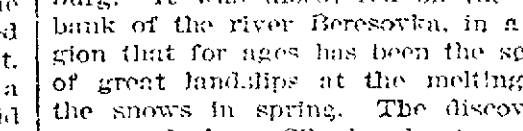

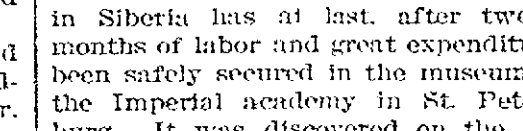

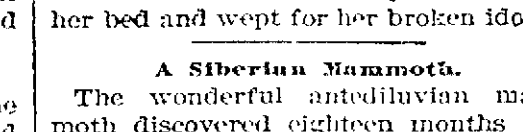

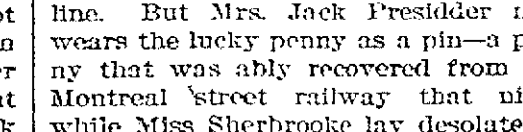

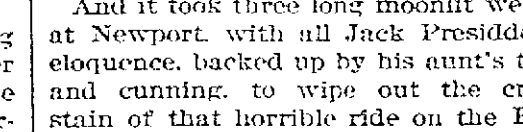

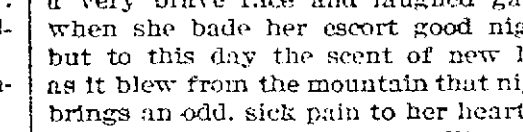

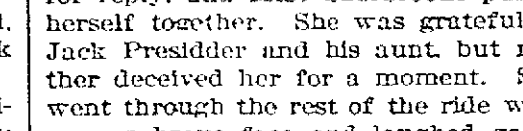

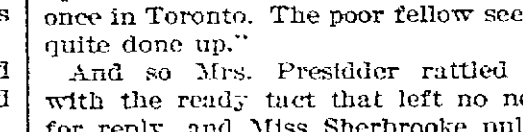

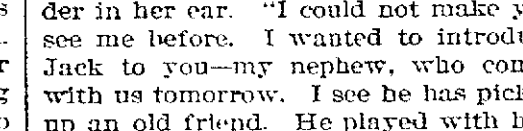

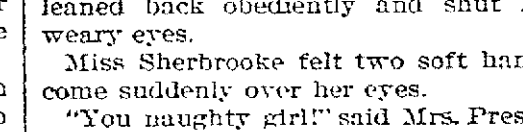

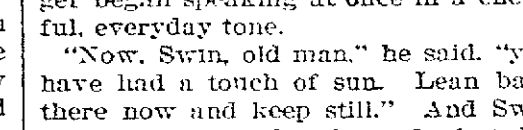

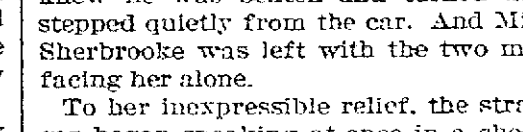

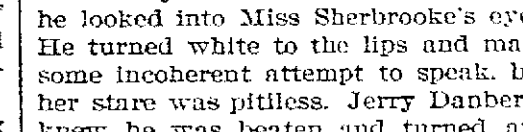

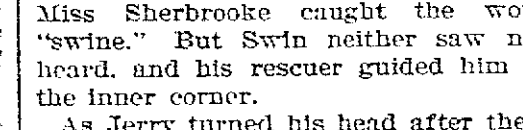

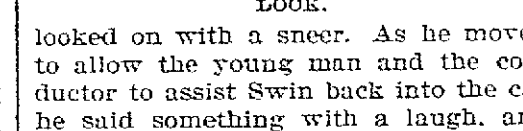

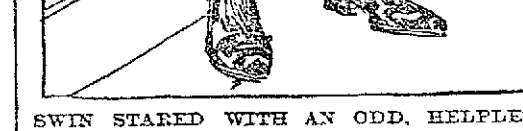

He was totally helpless now, and only his own heavy weight seemed keeping him upright.

The conductor retreated to the rear after a few backward glances and seemed to think there was nothing to fear. The front seat gradually emptied, save for those two, and still nothing happened. Was he possibly safe, after all?

A sudden jerk of the car brought her heart to her throat. Swin's heavy body failed to respond as usual, and with one sickening plunge, he was over. In falling his hand struck the rail and caught it, and he hung out unconscious, with his feet on the footboard.

The next moment the young man by Miss Sherbrooke was over the back of the front seat and out on the footboard beside him. And he was not a moment too soon. As his arm touched the heavy body the clinched hand slackened and let go, and it was well then that the arm was strong.

The whole car was on its feet with a rush and confusion of cries. But Jerry

ONIONS FOR MARKET.

How to Prepare Them—A Topping Board—The Crate System.

The old way of topping onions by getting down on your knees or sitting down on a low stool all doubled up by the crate system of storing them altogether done away with, says an onion grower who gives some information in American Agriculturist on preparing them for market. I have made for topping purposes a topping bench of seven-eighths inch spruce lumber 6 feet long by 4 feet. Take two four inch pieces four feet long and place them four feet apart. On these nail the six foot strips, which are also four inches wide, one inch apart. Nail firmly and clinch the nails, placing the outside strips flush with the ends of the crosspieces, as the first cut shows. Around the edge nail a six inch strip, and the topping bench is done.

When ready to begin topping place this bench on top of two crates if you wish to sit at your work or on top of two barrels if you wish to stand. In it empty the onions from the crates. As you pour out each crate rattle the onions around, and all the dirt and other small stuff which may have been gathered up with them will pass through the slatted bottom. The rattle will brighten up the onions wonderfully. The bench will hold when heaped up six crates, or nine bushels. Place one of the crates you have emptied at your left, and, sitting erect on a crate, you are ready for operations.

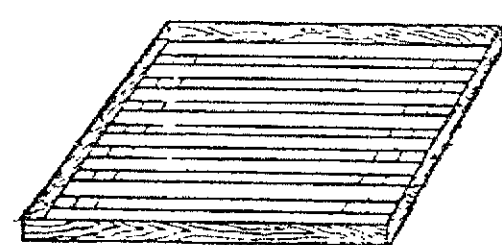

To begin with, you must have a sharp knife, and keep it sharp, as a dull one will surely tear the skin of the onion, and as soon as that is done it begins to rot. It may seem a simple operation to cut off an onion top, but there is a right way and a wrong one. The wrong way is to seize the onion and cut the top off by drawing the knife toward the body. This cuts the top off on the opposite side from your body and tears the onion down the other side. The right way to top is to hold the onion firmly in the left hand and with the knife seize the top an inch from the bulb and cut up. This makes a clean cut through the top.

Never top onions close to the bulb unless you want them to begin to grow at once, and do not top them until you want to market them, as they keep better with the tops on. In the old way, unless spread thin, this rule does not apply, as the tops draw moisture, which causes the onions to heat and mold, so that they rot and spoil. With the crate system the onions never heat or mold, not even if they are put in with the tops entirely green. They will dry out and come out splendidly any time before the next summer.

Handle onions as you would eggs at all times, for a bruise or cut will make them rot. By this way of topping a good spy boy will top six bushels an hour, and he will not feel half as tired as in the old way.

There is a large shrinkage in onions from keeping, not only from rot, but by shrinkage of the bulbs themselves. I think it is quite as much or more than potatoes.

My crates were made in a box shop and cost $10 per 100, but I have not been able to get them made for that price since. Some of my neighbors had some made last year and had to pay 20 cents each for them. With decent usage they will last at least ten years. They are not an expensive outfit.

TOPPING BENCH COMPLETE.

Increasing the Value of Manure.

It will pay well to give more attention than is done on the average farm to the preservation of barnyard manure, first, by guarding it from the sources of loss which occur in the ordinary open barnyard, and second, by treating it with materials calculated to reduce the losses from escaping ammonia on the one hand and to increase its content of phosphoric acid on the other. To accomplish this purpose acid phosphate appears to be a material producing large and profitable immediate increase in effectiveness of the manure, and experiments strongly suggest the possibility that the finely ground phosphatic rock from which acid phosphate is made may be found an economical substitute for the latter, by using it as an absorbent in the stables and thus securing an intimate mixture with the manure in its fresh condition.

Plants For Crude Drugs.

A number of common plants, occurring in some instances as weeds, furnish when properly collected and cured crude drugs such as are now imported in large part from Europe and elsewhere. A recent farmers' bulletin of the department of agriculture contains descriptions and cuts of such plants, methods of collecting, handling and curing and a list of dealers in drugs who are buyers.

PROFIT AND LOSS

(Original.)

The outlaws was thick around Toomstone county and I kept a store there. I sold 'em goods and trusted 'em when they hadn't no money, for you kin trust two kinds o' people—them as is honest and them as is at open war with the rest o' the world. It's the middle classes that beats you. There was one on 'em—the outlaws, I mean—that I didn't want around, for he'd carried things too far and there was a price set on his head. That was Dandy Jim. Dandy Jim's head was worth $1,000 to any man that could git the drop on him.

I was always a-figurin' how I could git him in a trap and git the reward. There wasn't no use in tryin' to do the job in an ordinary way, for Jim was as cool as a cucumber and slicker 'n a greased pole. I'd have to fix some way o' gittin a pint ahead. What I wanted was a confederate; some one to do the shootin' while I did the foolin'.

One day a young woman come to my place and wanted to work in my store. I told her I didn't want a woman, but she said she'd work for her board, and after talkin' to my wife about it I engaged her. She could do most anything, but she was handiest about keepin' my accounts. She must 'a' been a schoolmarm, for one day she took account o' stock and figured up and told me 'xactly what I was worth. "If I could git Dandy Jim," I said to her, "and turn him in dead or alive I'd be worth $2,000."

"But they say Dandy Jim's a hard man to take," she said.

"Maybe he'll come around here some day and I'll try it."

"How would you manage it?"

"If I know'd he was a-comin' I'd post some one outside to cover him. Then if he got the drop on me I'd signal the outsider to shoot him."

"What kind of a signal would you give? He'd shoot you before you could make any signs."

"Well, he'd likely tell me to throw up my hands, and that would be as good a signal as any."

"You're purty smart," she said. "I didn't give you credit for so much sense."

One day the gal told me that the stock was a-mittin' low, and if she was one she'd sell the balance and go and lay in a complete new outfit. She was such a good business woman that I did whatever she said, and I got up a "sale" and cleaned out everything. It fetched just $1,200 in money, and with this I concluded to put in the new outfit. The day before I went away I rode out to collect a debt of $50. I had a safe in which I kept the $1,200 on hand and didn't worry about it, for none o' the outlaws could open it and it was too heavy for 'em to carry away. The gal told me I might's well leave her the combination in case any one wanted any bills paid, but I was too sharp for that. Not that I doubted her honesty, but that some o' the outlaws might come along and force her to open it.

Well, I got my $50, and when I was a-ridin' up to the store I see the gal a-comin' excited-like to meet me.

"What's up?" says I.

"Dandy Jim's there waitin' for you."

"Humph," says I. "What's he goin' to do with me? Kill me?"

"Oh, no; he won't kill you. If you was dead, who'd open the safe?"

"I see."

"You might do what you said you would if he came."

"What was that?"

"Have some one cover him when you go in and when he tells you to throw up your hands shoot him."

"There isn't a man about the place."

"Reckon I'll do. I'm as good a shot as any man."

Well, I posted her at a window with a rifle right where she could see the man, then I walked into the house and the room where Dandy Jim was a-settin'.

"Howdy, Jim," I says. "Howdy," says he. "Jim," says I, "there's $1,000 offered for you. Reckon I might as well have it as any one." "How you goin' to git it?" he answers. "Well, there's two ways. One is dead and the other's alive—whichever you prefer."

"I prefer dead," says he, "and considerin' I've got my hand on my gun I think it's you that's dead. I'll trouble you to throw up your hands."

"If I does that," I says, "the drop's on you, seein' I got a pal posted outside the window to shoot you as soon as I raise an arm. It is a signal."

"You're mighty smart," he says. "It's only takin' time by the forelock," says I. "Who have you got outside?" "One o' the best shots in Arizona, though nothin' but a woman." "Yes, and mighty smart if she is a woman."

"How do you know that?" "Because she's my wife. I sent her here to kit you to turn your stock into cash, then she sent for me to take it in."

"Is that the game?" I asked, a cold chill runnin' down my spine. "You can find out," he says, "if you'll throw up your hands."

"I'll do it," says I, "and if you're lyin' you'll pay for the deception with your life."

With that I throwed up both hands and the gal instead o' shootin' comes to the window grinnin', and asks me if that was the signal and whether we hadn't better wait a spell, and if it wouldn't be cruel to shoot a man in cold blood. Then I knowed the game was up, so I told 'em I'd open the safe—for it was plain I was a dead man if I didn't—and while the gal kept me covered Jim took the plunder, includin' the $50 I'd just collected. Then the gal tuk my best horse and my wife's saddle, and as they galloped away she sung out:

"I made a mistake in the accounts. There's $12.50 to be charged up to profit and loss."

MARKET CONDITIONS.

Wheat Production—Cattle Feeding. The Wool Situation.

It is evident now that the estimates of wheat production made prior to harvest will have to be revised. In few sections has the yield been up to the early expectations or in accordance with the appearance of the crop before it was harvested. Disappointing thrashing returns are the rule. Spring wheat has also suffered from various causes, dry weather principally, and late sown fields will return light yields. Under these conditions and a very tight marketing prices have advanced somewhat and are now about 10 cents higher than a year ago. Receipts of wheat for the first four weeks of the new crop year have been only 10,022,000 bushels against 17,818,000 bushels a year ago and 20,872,000 bushels two years ago. Various theories are advanced to account for the tight marketing—hold scarcity of labor and demands on time made by the tardy corn crop, confidence of producers, etc. Probably the second theory has as much to do with it as any, and when the rush of work slackens a freer movement may be expected. As to prices, while they should be better than last year there seems to be no reason to expect dollar wheat.

The markets are still well supplied with cattle, but the proportion of good fat steers is gradually decreasing. There are yet enough to supply the trade for such kinds, the less particular trade taking the fair grades. But it seems probable that before long there will be a wider range between the best and the lower grades than now and that the difference will be made by a better market for the better cattle as well as a worse one for the others. This is too big a country to allow any one to get at the numbers or condition of stock to come forward, but what evidence we have points to plenty of the ordinary and only fair classes and not a large supply of good ones. A little later it would seem that good cattle should sell better. The market for feeders has been dull for the past six weeks, and comparatively little cattle is going from distributing centers to the country to be fattened. The price of corn is too attractive, and it is too scarce to allow a heavy feeding business. The natural result of such conditions should be a better market for good cattle, but the laws of trade do not always act promptly, and it is hard to tell when this influence will be felt. It will be felt, however, or 1903 will be an exception to all previous history.

Fine wools have barely maintained their position in foreign markets of late, while the lower grades have advanced sharply. A few years ago fine wools were very scarce and the low and medium grades abundant. Now the reverse seems to be true. It is likely that the activity and strength of low wools lie in the need of manufacturers to secure materials to make cheap cloth. When fine wools, through their comparative scarcity, advanced, the manufacturers found that they must sell their goods higher because they cost more. But they found it hard to secure advances and so looked for profit in cheaper goods made from less costly materials. They have succeeded in making these goods popular, and that is why the low wools have advanced.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Macaroni Wheat For Bread. Almost a million bushels of macaroni wheat were used last year by our macaroni factories. The most important victory has been gained, however, in demonstrating that these wheats may be used in making the very best bread. After several bakers had made private tests of the flour for bread the department of agriculture recently made a much more thorough test on a large scale in co-operation with one of the largest bakers in the country. Over 200 loaves of the bread were sent to as many different parties in all portions of the United States east of the Rocky mountains for examination. With each loaf was sent another loaf made from good North Dakota patent spring wheat flour, no indication being given of the purpose of the experiment or what the two loaves were or how they were made. The recipients of these loaves were selected as being experts in their line of business and were asked to give their opinion of the relative merits of the two loaves. The consensus of opinion of these people was to the effect that the macaroni wheat loaf was the better of the two, the vote standing 108 to 74 in its favor. This demonstration at once opens another large market for the grain. The results were a surprise to many millers and bakers concerned in the test, though it was known to the writer that these wheats were the most popular in making bread in France and large portions of Russia. Dozens of mills are now regularly grinding the grain, both for bread flour and for the manufacture of macaroni. Several of the most important mills in Texas have already signified their intention of using the wheat just as soon as it can be obtained. It is therefore left with the farmer to produce the wheat, which is a very easy matter. Any surplus of the grain finds at once a ready sale in France and Italy so long as it is of good quality.—M. A. Carleton Before Farmers' Congress.

WEED REMEDIES.

How to Use Wayside Growths to Cure Various Ills.

Many of the plants that are popularly known today as "just common weeds" were treasured by the ancients, and even so recently as "grandmother's day," for their medicinal properties, says the Philadelphia Record. In fact, our grandmothers believed implicitly that in every locality might be found the plants that would prove effective for the diseases of that country. The people of today are slowly awakening to a realization of the value of these inexpensive home remedies, many of which are sold by druggists under a different name.

There is frequent demand for a remedy for catarrh in the head. Much relief may be obtained by using a nasal douche, twice a day, of warm water with a little salt and sweet milk added. Afterward sniff pure olive oil into the nostrils. The douche cleanses and the oil heals, which may prove effective in some cases, but a "weed remedy" has proved more effective. A bad case of catarrh has been cured by smoking mullein leaves. The smoke must be forced through the nostrils; it has a tendency to heal and dry those passages leading to the lungs. Mullein is a plant that grows wild in many states and resembles the tobacco leaf in color, shape and growth.

The best of salve can be made from the mullein blossoms. If the blossoms are gathered and put into a bottle and hung in the sun they will in time become oil, which is very healing. They may be fried in fresh butter and the liquid strained into boxes ready for use when cold.

"May butter is best to use for salves," said an elderly lady. No doubt some readers may think this is superstition, but after much thought will agree with her. In May pastures are generally of clover, dandelion, etc., and these are said to contain excellent medical properties. Clover tea and salve made from the clover blossoms is said to be an effective cancer cure.

Broke Into his House.

How to Clean Men's Clothes.

For cleaning men's clothes, particularly coat collars, the following is recommended: One pint of deodorized benzine, one-half dram sulphuric ether, one-half dram chloroform, one dram alcohol and a very little good cologne. Apply with an old piece of silk, black for the clothes and white for neckties and light vests.

How to Make Raisin Ice Cream.

Take half a pound of seeded raisins and boil them gently for fifteen minutes in a pint of milk with a small bit of cinnamon; blend one-fourth of a pound of almonds and pound one in a mortar with a few drops of rosewater, then two ounces each of preserved ginger and citron beat the yolks of four eggs to a cream with one-half a pound of sugar; strain the raisins and cinnamon from the milk, which can afterward be used in a pudding; return the milk to the fire and stir while the eggs and sugar are being added to it and it begins to thicken, then remove and when cold add the other ingredients with a quart of sweetened cream. Freeze in the usual way. Each serving may be sprinkled with finely chopped nuts.

Never ask Advice.

When you have a cough or cold don't ask what is good for it and get some medicine with little or no merit and perhaps dangerous. Ask for Foley's Honey and Tar, the greatest throat and lung remedy, it cures coughs and colds quickly. Johnson & Hill Co.

That Government Seed Fraud.

It is reported that the seed fraud that has been going on for some years in the past is to be investigated. It is said that the seeds have been short measure and of inferior quality.

The best way to do away with the seed fraud is to stop sending out seeds altogether. It costs the government a lot of money and it does nobody any good. Few, if any, of the seeds are ever planted, most of them being fed to chickens where they are of a sort that chickens will eat, while others lie about and are never made any use of.

The benefit derived from the distribution of seeds is so small that it would seem as if the congressmen themselves would become ashamed of the wanton waste of money and abolish the practice without any solicitation from the public.

We are all willing to allow the congressmen to work any possible graft they can to keep their constituents in line, but it would seem as if this particular scheme was doing them so little good that it might be abolished without injuring anybody's prospects.

Narrow Minded Advice.

Governor LaFollette in a recent speech advised those who heard him to read only such papers as told his side of the story, and to avoid those that were giving the other fellow's side.

This is real political advice. The man who has only his own interests at heart regardless of his purpose will always give you just this kind of advice. He will give you lots of it, too, and all free of charge, for he knows that if he succeeds in getting one convert to his way, the man will never have a chance of finding out the truth as long as he follows this method.

It has been said that Governor LaFollette is very democratic in his ideas; in fact that he is more of a democrat than lots of men who profess to be democrats, but this does not look much like it. This is not our idea of democracy. We want every man, woman and child to read all they can digest of political matters, and think and talk of the subjects and then after they have threshed out the grain from the chaff to govern themselves accordingly.

Our public schools are established and maintained in order that every child may grow up to be a man with a mind of his own, so that he may decide on important subjects for himself without following blindly the leadership of some politician who has only personal aggrandizement in view, and it is this spirit that has brought mankind to the height of civilization which has now been reached. Blindly following one man and each person thinking for himself is the one great difference between a monarchy and a democratic form of government.

But the governor spoke too late, people will go right on reading both sides of the case just the same as they did before he volunteered his advice, and instead of strengthening his position he has very materially weakened it.

The case of Miss Todd, the young woman postmistress in Delaware who was "fired" by Postmaster General Payne for no other reason on earth than that she was obnoxious to the Addicks faction of the republican party in that state, is causing much unfavorable comment and likewise causing some high republican officials a few bad half hours. The statement of Postmaster General Payne that President Roosevelt was fully aware of the deal that had been made for the division of the spoils of office in Delaware is rather tough on a civil service reformer such as the President professes to be. It is no doubt, also, especially disheartening to those republicans who were hopeful that their party and their administration would not be disgraced by complicity in the attempt to Addicksize the state of Delaware, and assist him in the purchase of the United States Senatorship from that state. It was expected and anticipated that Payne would give Addicks his share of the political spoils, being a machine politician himself, but it was a shock to the lovers of decent government that the President should have acquiesced in the Addicks game. Miss Todd had committed no offense for which her dismissal should have been requested. There was no word against her personal or official conduct, no petition from the patrons of the office for her removal. She simply was against Addicks and that was crime enough in the eyes of a machine politician like the Postmaster General. What will Roosevelt do? Will he reinstate Miss Todd or stand by the action of the Postmaster General? He may do a lot of talking, but, as he says, "words are good only when backed by deeds."

However favorably or otherwise Gov. LaFollette may be esteemed his statement of the fact shown by the state labor bureau that the cost of living has advanced 27 per cent since 1897 while the increase in wages has been less than 10 per cent, loses none of its significance, and affords a sorry commentary on the widely boasted Republican tariff-made prosperity. The conditions are no worse in Wisconsin, if they are really as bad, as generally throughout the country, and how stubbornly the showing of the state labor bureau controverts the Republican pretense of tariff-made prosperity. The fact is that the condition of labor would be infinitely improved were it not for the monopoly-fostering privileges afforded by the so-called protective system that robs the many that the few may inordinately prosper. With equal conditions the struggle of the toiler must ever be hard enough, but the unequal conditions maintained by the Republican tariff system imposes excessive burdens upon the laboring classes and at best scarcely affords them a scanty living, while if they were permitted the full fruits of their toil much would be possible in the way of additional comforts that they are now denied as well as the possibility of savings that would put the provident beyond the necessity of unceasing labor in old age. Whatever of prosperity is at present enjoyed by the workingman is despite and not in consequence of the existing tariff system, whose unequal conditions are so strenuously successfully contended for by its beneficiaries. The possibility of ameliorating the condition of the working classes is so largely dependent upon their own action, which has been so easily influenced in the past against their own interests that the problem is difficult. There are evidences, however, that the light is breaking and that reason will assert itself and when once the changed conditions are realized the tariff issue will be settled in labor's favor and for all time.—Waukesha Dispatch.

The crying need of this country is more trees. Trees of any kind; white willow, box elder, soft maple, cotton wood, poplar or anything else that will grow quick and make a wind break, says the Mitchell, (S. D.) Gazette. Plant them in hedges, in groves, in sink holes, along sloughs and creeks, anywhere and everywhere that there is a chance for them to grow. Set them deep and cultivate them all you can. If you can't cultivate them put a mulching of straw six inches deep around them to keep down the weeds, keep stock away from them and they will do the rest. They will stop the fearful driving winds that now sweep up from the arid plains of Nebraska and burn up the crops; they will put an end to blizzards, for the very essence of the blizzard is an unbroken stretch of prairie over which the wind can sweep and grind the snow to powder, they will prevent droughts by preventing the surface moisture from running off into the stream. They will break the coal trusts far more effectually than any legislation that can be devised. In time they will solve the question of cheap lumber and a score of other problems that harass and distress the inhabitant of these fertile plains. Plant acres of them and you will have a heritage of verdure which will bless your community for all time.

Slighted the Old Soldiers.

Quite a commotion was caused among the G. A. R. circles the past week by the action of a Lutheran minister at Neenah, who refused to allow one of the deceased members of the post of that city brought into the church with his uniform on, or to allow the post to attend the services in a body.

The deceased soldier, who was Ferdinand Sauer, had been a member of the Lutheran church for a number of years and was one of the most highly respected members of the post in Neenah, and it was the intention of the post to bury their comrade in the manner that is customary with them, not having any idea that it would conflict in any way with the rules of the church, but they were notified the day before of the decision of the minister and the consequence was that none of his old comrades attended the funeral.

The coffin had also been draped with an American flag, but when the church door was reached the minister informed the pall bearers that this would have to be removed before the body could be taken into the church.

It is not only the members of the post at Neenah that are incensed over the matter, but it has stirred them up all over the state. It certainly does seem that when a man is dead and the last sad rites are to be performed that all petty beliefs, that can in no way affect a man's after life, could as well be laid aside for the time being and thus a man's body be consigned to its last resting place both the way himself and his comrades want it to be done.

Are Helping Carriers.

In many parts of the state, especially where rural routes have been long established and are fully appreciated, a custom has grown up among the patrons, which wins the everlasting gratitude of the carriers and shows appreciation, says the Wausau Record. It is an undisputed fact that the carriers are woefully underpaid. After they have fed their horses, kept their vehicles in repair and met other unavoidable expenses very little is left of the small salary they receive. The patrons appreciate this fact and have been helping the faithful carriers out by leaving sacks of oats and potatoes, baskets of vegetables and other things beside their mail boxes. In some places the custom has been so general that the carrier comes in with some thing almost every evening.

Love Is The Main Thing.

Political economists have told us that self-interest is the mainspring of industry. It is not true. Love is the mainspring of industry. It is love for home and the wife and the children that keeps all the busy wheels of industry revolving, that calls the factory hands to the mill, that nerves the arm of the blacksmith working at the forge, that inspires the farmer at his plough and the merchant at his desk, that gives courage to the soldier and patience to the teacher. Erskine was asked how he dared as an unknown barrister face a hostile court and insist on his right to be heard. "I felt my children," he replied, tugging at my robe and saying, here is your chance, father, to get us bread."

In this vision of the children, dependent on us, that inspires us all in the battle of life. It is for our homes and our children we maintain our churches.

Whether we cultivate a farm, or operate a factory, or manage a store, or build and conduct a railroad, or paint pictures or write books or preach sermons, or enact and enforce laws,—whatever we do, the end of our activity is the nature and training of children in this primary school, which we call life, we know not what, hereafter.—Rev. Lyman Abbott, in the September Atlantic.

Builds up muscular flesh, healthy tissue, rich, red blood; clears the stomach, kidneys and liver. That's what Rocky Mountain Tea will do. 35 cents. Johnson & Hill Co.

These trains have proven quite popular to excursionists, and nearly every Sunday good sized crowds have taken advantage of the chance to make a trip to some point east of here.

—Whitman and Davis, who are being featured this year in "Man to Man," created the parts of "Bud" and "Cissy" two years ago and have played them continuously ever since and have scored an emphatic personal success by reason of their exceedingly clever work in the parts and their exceptionally fine singing and dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Morzynski of the west side have issued invitations announcing the marriage of their daughter Mary to Frank Tomczyk of Neillsville at the SS. Peter and Paul church on October 19th at nine o'clock.
Mr. and Mrs. Tomczyk will make their future home at Neillsville where the groom holds a responsible position with the Neillsville Furniture company.

—Man to Man, which will make its first visit to Grand Rapids next Tuesday night, is one of the few melodramas which lives, and as this admirable play is now in its third season and has been played over 500 times it must live by "right of night." The cast, scenery and costumes which will be seen here are the same as secured such universal approval of the New York press and public a short time ago. Seats on sale Saturday.

In order that the people of Grand Rapids may have an opportunity to learn more fully about Kindergarten teaching the Kindergarten Supervisor desires a meeting of mothers and all others interested in Kindergarten work to meet her in the Kindergarten room of the Howe building on the afternoon of Thursday, October 8, three o'clock. At these meetings the purpose of the Kindergarten will be discussed, its aims and methods explained.

—It is with pleasure that we announce the coming of the popular young American actor, Mr. Oliver Labadie, at the Grand Opera House on Friday night in "In Louisiana." Mr.
Labadie has been before the public twenty years, has never had or been with a poor attraction. The New York Clipper says: "Too much credit cannot be given to Mr. Oliver Labadie for the smooth production of In Louisiana. It shows his careful training.
He is a master of his art." Seats now on sale.

Milk is growing in popularity as a wash or "chaser" among whisky drinkers, and is recommended by the fact that it has a tendency to neutralize the effect of whisky upon the breath and do away to some extent with the alcoholic fumes. Taken in the present proportions however, the process of neutralizing is not complete and it is estimated that to secure perfect results one pint of whisky would require about a barrel of milk.

The recovery of Mrs. David Wingad from the sickness which for years has afflicted her is a source of great pleasure to her family and friends. Mrs.
Wingad had been a sufferer from some stomach and liver trouble, and was unable to eat without suffering pain afterward and couldn't sleep on account of the distress she felt in her side. The doctors seemed unable to help her, until fortunately, she consulted Dr. McElwee, who comes to the Witter House every month and whose success as a specialist is so well known to Grand Rapids people. The doctor said he could cure her and much to the surprise of the patient and her many friends, has succeeded in doing so. Mrs. Wingad says that she never has suffered an hours pain since starting to take Dr. McElwee's treatments, can now eat nearly everything with no pain whatever, and sleeps all night every night. Her garden shows her restored strength since she has worked in it every day for the first time in several years. Mrs. Wingad thinks every chronic sufferer ought to know what Dr. McElwee has done in her case.

Weather to Expect

Autumnal storms, originating last month, will pass eastward 1st and 2d, closely followed by bright weather;
a little cool, but with a tang in the air that will smoothe like a balm but be a spur to energy and heartiness in its crispness—the wholesome touch of fall. The disturbing force of earth's equinox will be about spent, and we may count upon mellow autumn weather, cool and pleasant, cloudless and frosty nights. Minor storms 5th and 6th; the nights will fall colder, with strong hints of fuel and flannel northward. The first regular storm period, 11th to 14th, will be preceded by a change to warmer, with tendencies to storminess and showery weather. Bright, cool days, with frost at night, will follow. Minor storms 17th and 18th. Thick, soft, white mist will precede last regular storm period, 22d to 25th. Wet and gloomy days will come, so that life becomes a burden. An oppressive, lead-colored mist will hang over the earth in the south, and northward cover everything with sleet. Long, low moaning gusts of wind will sweep along the earth, carrying the leaves as they tear them from the trees. Minor storms 28th and 29th. The month will close with crisp, bright weather.

Quincy Adams Sawyer.

The much heralded and extensively advertised Quincy Adams Sawyer company held forth at the opera house on Thursday evening and so far as can be learned the greater portion of the audience was sadly disappointed in the production.

Those who had read the book, and there were many, had admitted that the story was one without beginning, end, or plot, and it was the general hope that something would be done in the dramatization of the story that would make it interesting, but this was not the case.

Those who paid a dollar or seventy-five cents to see the play felt that they had been fleeced, even tho the actors did their best, and most of them were good, to give the people a good show.

The play was a nice clean one, there were some ludicrous situations, and—guess that was all.

Big Shorthorn Sale.

The second annual Shorthorn cattle sale will be held in this city on November 5th at which there will be 50 head of fancy stock sold to the highest bidder. Of the above number C. E.
Blodgett will consign 46 and O. W.
Cummings of Shefield, Ill., the balance. The sale will take place under a large tent at the Blodgett stock farm with raised seats to accommodate fully 500 persons. Prominent breeders from this and adjoining states will be here in large numbers to attend. The sale will be conducted by Col. Jones and Col. Barclay, two of the best stock auctioneers in the country.—Marsh-

Death of Charles Rihal.

Charles Rihal, who had been a resident of this city only since last June, died on Saturday at his home on the west side from liver trouble.

He leaves a wife and two small children to mourn for his death. The funeral occurred on Monday from the Congregational church, Rev. B. J. H.
Shaw preaching the funeral service.

Deceased was a member of the Knights of Maccabees, in which order he carried $1000 insurance. The Maccabees attended in a body and performed their usual services at the grave side.

Death of Henry Primeau.

Henry Primeau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Primeau, died on Sunday at the age of 20 years, the case of his disease being paralysis.

He was taken sick on Thursday and gradually grew worse until he passed away on Sunday afternoon. The funeral occurred on Tuesday from the Catholic church, Rev. F. Van Roosmalen conducting the service. The family have the sympathy of all in their sad affliction.

Beaten by Merrill.

The high school football eleven went to Merrill on Saturday and lost a game to the high school team of that city by a score of 16 to 0. The boys state that the Merrill team averaged considerably heavier than the home team, but they managed to hold the score down pretty well.

On Saturday, October 10th, the Stevens Point team will visit this city and play the local team on the high school grounds.

The New Arabian Nights

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

"Most gentlemen do. Will you take a little brandy?"

The prince signified in the affirmative, and the other immediately poured some of the spirit into a tumbler.

"Poor old Maltby!" ejaculated the president as the prince drained the glass. "He drank near upon a pint, and little enough good it seemed to do him."

"I am more amenable to treatment," said the prince, a good deal revived. "I am my own man again at once, as you perceive. And so, let me ask you, what are my directions?"

"You will proceed along the Strand, in the direction of the city, and on the left hand pavement, until you meet the gentleman who has just left the room. He will continue your instructions and him you will have the kindness to obey—the authority of the club is vested in his person for the night. And now," added the president, "I wish you a pleasant walk."

Florizel acknowledged the salutation rather awkwardly and took his leave. He passed through the smoking room, where the bulk of the players were still consuming champagne, some of which he had himself ordered and paid for, and he was surprised to find himself cursing them in his heart. He put on his hat and greatcoat in the cabinet and selected his umbrella from a corner. The familiarity of these acts and the thought that he was about them for the last time betrayed him into a fit of laughter which sounded unpleasant.

you not only my life, but a lesson, and I should be unworthy of my rank if I did not show myself grateful to my teacher. Let it be yours to choose the manner."

There was a pause, during which the carriage continued to speed through the streets, and the two men were each buried in his own reflections. The silence was broken by Colonel Geraldine.

"Your highness," said he, "has by this time a considerable body of prisoners. There is at least one criminal among the number to whom justice should be dealt. Our oath forbids us all recourse to law, and discretion would forbid it equally if the oath were loosened. May I inquire your highness' intention?"

"It is decided," answered Florizel. "The president must fall in duel. It only remains to choose his adversary."

"Your highness has permitted me to name my own recompense," said the colonel. "Will he permit me to ask the appointment of my brother? It is an honorable post, but I dare assure your highness that the lad will acquit himself with credit."

"You ask me an ungracious favor," said the prince, "but I must refuse you nothing."

The colonel kissed his hand with the greatest affection, and at that moment the carriage rolled under the archway of the prince's splendid residence.

An hour after, Florizel in his official robes and covered with all the orders of Bohemia received the members of

The SUICIDE CLUB

PART II

Story of the Physician and the Saratoga Trunk

MR. SILAS Q. SCUDDAMORE was a young American of a simple and harmless disposition, which was the more to his credit as he came from New England, a quarter of the new world not precisely famous for these qualities. Although he was exceedingly rich, he kept a note of all his expenses in a little paper pocketbook, and he had chosen to study the attractions of Paris from the seventh story of what is called a furnished hotel in the Latin quarter. There was a great deal of habit in his penuriousness, and his virtue, which was very remarkable among his associates, was principally founded upon diffidence and youth.

The next room to his was inhabited by a lady, very attractive in her air and very elegant in toilet, whom on his first arrival he had taken for a countess. In course of time he had learned that she was known by the name of Mme. Zephyrine and that whatever station she occupied in life it was not that of a person of title. Mme. Zephyrine, probably in the hope of enchanting the young American, used to haunt him on the stairs with a civil inclination, a word, or course, and a knockdown look out of her black eyes and with the revelation of an admirable foot and ankle. But these advances, so far from encouraging Mr. Scuddamore, plunged him into the depths of depression and bashfulness. She had come to him several times for a light or to apologize for the imaginary depredations of her poodle, but his mouth was closed in the presence of so superior a being, his French promptly left him and his could only stare and stammer until she was gone. The stammering of their intercourse did not prevent him from throwing out insinuations of a very glorious order when he was safely alone with a few maids.

The room on the other side of the American—for there were three rooms on a floor in the hotel—was tenanted by an old English physician of rather doubtful reputation. Dr. Noel, for that was his name, had been forced to leave London, where he enjoyed a large and increasing practice, and it was hinted that the police had been the instigators of this change of scene. At least he, who had made something of a figure in earlier life, now dwelt in the Latin quarter in great simplicity and solitude and devoted much of his time to study. Mr. Scuddamore had made his acquaintance, and the pair would now and then dine together frugally in a restaurant across the street.

Silas Q. Scuddamore had many little vices of the more respectable order and was not restrained by delicacy from indulging them in many rather doubtful ways. Chief among his foibles stood curiosity. He was a born gossip, and life, and especially those parts of it in which he had no experience, interested him to the degree of passion. He was a pert, invincible questioner, pushing his inquiries with equal pertinacity and indiscretion. He had been observed when he took a letter to the post to weigh it in his hand, to turn it over and over and to study the address with care; and when he found a flaw in the partition between his room and Mme. Zephyrine's, instead of filling it up, he enlarged and improved the opening and made use of it as a spy hole on his neighbor's affairs.

One day, in the end of March, his curiosity growing as it was indulged, he enlarged the hole a little further, so that he might command another corner of the room. That evening when he went as usual to inspect Mme. Zephyrine's movements he was astonished to find the aperture obscured in an odd manner on the other side and still more astonished when the obstacle was suddenly withdrawn and a titter of laughter reached his ears. Some of the plaster had evidently betrayed the secret of his spy hole, and his neighbor had been returning the compliment in kind. Mr. Scuddamore was moved to a very acute feeling of annoyance. He condemned Mme. Zephyrine unmercifully. He even blamed himself, but when he found next day that she had taken no means to balk him of his favorite pastime he continued to profit by her carelessness and to gratify his idle curiosity.

That next day Mme. Zephyrine received a long visit from a tall, loosely built man of fifty or upward, whom Silas had not hitherto seen. His tweed suit and colored shirt, no less than his shaggy side whiskers, identified him as a Britisher, and his dull gray eye affected Silas with a sense of cold. He kept screwing his mouth from side to side and round and round during the whole colloquy, which was carried on in whispers. More than once it seemed to the young New Englander as if their gestures indicated his own apartment, but the only thing definite he could gather by the most scrupulous attention was this remark made by the Englishman in a somewhat higher key, as if in answer to some reluctance or opposition:

"I have studied his taste to a nicety, and I tell you again and again you are the only woman of the sort that I can lay my hands on."

In answer to this Mme. Zephyrine sighed and appeared by a gesture to resign herself like one yielding to unqualified authority.

That afternoon the observatory was finally blinded, a wardrobe having been drawn in front of it upon the other side, and while Silas was still lamenting over this misfortune, which he attributed to the Britisher's malign suggestion, the concierge brought him up a letter in a female handwriting. It was conceived in French of no very rigorous orthography, bore no signature and in the most encouraging terms invited the young American to be present in a certain part of the Bullier ball at 11 o'clock that night. Curiosity and timidity fought a long battle in his heart. Sometimes he was all virtue, sometimes all fire and daring, and the result of that was that long before 10 Mr. Silas Q. Scuddamore presented himself in unimpeachable attire at the door of the Bullier ballrooms and paid his entry money with a sense of reckless delirium that was not without its charm.

It was the carnival time, and the ball was very full and noisy. The lights and the crowd at first rather abashed our young adventurer, and then, mounting to his brain with a sort of intoxication, put him in possession of more than his own share of manhood. He felt ready to face the devil, and strutted in the ballroom with the swagger of a cavalier. While he was thus parading he became aware of Mme. Zephyrine and her Britisher in conference behind a pillar. The cat-like spirit of eavesdropping overcame him at once. He stole nearer and nearer on the couple from behind, until he was within earshot.

"That is the man," the Britisher was saying. "There—with the long blond hair—speaking to a girl in green."

Silas identified a very handsome young fellow of small stature, who was plainly the object of this designation.

"It is well," said Mme. Zephyrine. "I shall do my utmost. But, remember, the best of us may fail in such a matter."

"Tut!" returned her companion. "I answer for the result. Have I not chosen you from thirty? Go, but be wary of the prince. I cannot think what cursed accident has brought him here tonight. As if there were not a dozen halls in Paris better worth his notice than this riot of students and counter jumpers! See him where he sits, more like a reigning emperor at home than a prince upon his holidays."

Silas was again lucky. He observed a person of rather a full build, strikingly handsome and of a very stately and courteous demeanor seated at table with another handsome young man, several years his junior, who addressed him with conspicuous deference. The name of prince struck gratefully on Silas' republican hearing, and the aspect of the person to which that name was applied exercised its usual charm upon his mind. He left Mme. Zephyrine and her Englishman to take care of each other and, threading his way through the assembly, approached the table which the prince and his confidant had honored with their choice.

"I tell you, Geraldine," the former was saying, "the action is madness. Yourself, I am glad to remember it, chose your brother for this perilous service, and you are bound in duty to have a guard upon his conduct. He has consented to delay so many days in Paris. That was already an imprudence, considering the character of the man he has to deal with, but now, when he is within eight and forty hours of his departure, when he is within two or three days of the decisive trial, I ask you is this a place for him to spend his time? He should be in a gallery at practice; he should be sleeping long hours and taking moderate exercise on foot; he should be on a rigorous diet, without white wines or brandy. Does the dog imagine we are all playing comedy? The thing is deadly earnest, Geraldine."

"I know the lad too well to interfere," replied Colonel Geraldine, "and well enough not to be alarmed. He is more cautious than you fancy and of an indomitable spirit. If it had been a woman, I should not say so much, but I trust the president to him and the two valets without an instant's apprehension."

MODESTY OF THE GREAT. Gladstone and Darwin Felt Themselves "Ordinary Persons."

In "Studies in Contemporary Biography," by James Bryce, there occur two stories which caused some of the critics to express astonishment at the "modesty of the great." The stories are these:

"Meeting Mr. Gladstone in the lobby and seeing his face saddened by the troubles in Ireland, Mr. Bryce tried to divert his thoughts by mentioning a recent discovery—to wit, that Dante had been saved from want in his last years by a lectureship at Ravenna. Mr. Gladstone's face lit up at once, and he said, 'How strange it is to think that these great souls, whose works are a beacon light to all the generations that have come after them, should have had cares and anxieties to vex them in their daily life just like the rest of us common mortals!'"

"The words reminded me," adds the author, "that a few days before I had heard Mr. Darwin, in dwelling upon the pleasure a visit paid by Mr. Gladstone had given him, say, 'And he talked just as if he had been an ordinary person like one of ourselves.' The two men were alike unconscious of their greatness."

It is only the little who think themselves great. They are like those who do not know much and therefore imagine that there is not much to know. The great do not think themselves so, just as the learned are overwhelmed by their ignorance.

A HOSPITAL FOR SICK WATCHES

A fall causes many a watch to stop. The delicate shafts, jewels and pivots can not withstand such a shock, and snap right off. Should this occur to your watch it will be profitable for you to have us look at your watch at once. Every watchmaker can't fix a sick watch—he may patch it up but he must be a skilled mechanic to effect a permanent cure.

W.G. SCOTT, The West Side Jeweler

THREE MEN FELL UPON PRINCE FLORIZEL.

antly in his own ears. He conceived a reluctance to leave the cabinet and turned instead to the window. The sight of the lamps and the darkness recalled him to himself.

"Come, come! I must be a man," he thought, "and tear myself away."

At the corner of Box court three men fell upon Prince Florizel, and he was unceremoniously thrust into a carriage, which at once drove rapidly away. There was already an occupant.

"Will your highness pardon my zeal?" said a well-known voice.

The prince threw himself upon the colonel's neck in a passion of relief.

"How can I ever thank you?" he cried. "And how was this effected?"

"Altho' he had been willing to march upon his death, he was overjoyed to yield to friendly violence and return once more to life and hope."

"You can thank me effectually enough," replied the colonel, "by avoiding all such dangers in the future. And, as for your second question, all has been managed by the simplest means. I arranged this afternoon with a confidential detective. Secrecy has been proclaimed and paid for. Your own servants have been principally engaged in the affair. The house in Box court has been surrounded since midnight, and this, which is one of your carriages, has been awaiting you for nearly an hour."

"And the miserable creature who was to have slain me—what of him?" inquired the prince.

"He was phoned as he left the club," replied the colonel, "and now waits your sentence at the palace, where he will soon be joined by his accomplices."

"Geraldine," said the prince, "you have saved me against my explicit orders, and you have done well. I owe

the Suicide club.

"Foolish and wicked men," said he, "as many of you as have been driven into this strait by the lack of fortune shall receive employment and remuneration from my officers. Those who suffer under a sense of guilt must have recourse to a higher and more generous potentate than I. I feel pity for all of you, deeper than you can imagine. Tomorrow you shall tell me your stories, and as you answer more frankly I shall be the more able to remedy your misfortunes. As for you," he added, turning to the president, "I should only offend a person of your parts by any offer of assistance, but I have instead a piece of diversion to propose to you. Here," laying his hand on the shoulder of Colonel Geraldine's young brother, "is an officer of mine who desires to make a little tour upon the continent, and I ask you as a favor to accompany him on this excursion. Do you, he went on, changing his tone—"do you show well with the pistol? Because you may have need of that accomplishment. When two men go travelling together, it is best to be prepared for all. Let me add that if by any chance you should lose young Mr. Geraldine upon the way, I shall always have another member of my household to place at your disposal, and I am known, Mr. President, to have long eyesight and as long an arm."

With these words, said with much sternness, the prince concluded his address. Next morning the members of the club were suitably provided for by his munificence, and the president set forth upon his travels under the supervision of Mr. Geraldine and a pair of faithful and adroit jockeys well trained in the prince's household. Not content with this, discreet agents were put in possession of the house in Box court, and all letters or visitors for the Suicide club or its officials were to be examined by Prince Florizel in person.

The Chattanooga Advertising.

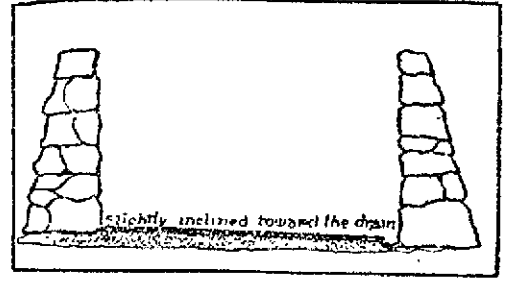

The Chattanooga Medicine Company, with laboratories and general offices at Chattanooga, Tennessee, and branch houses at St. Louis, Mo., and San Francisco, Cal., has become one of the largest proprietary medicine concerns in the world. In the growth of this great business two factors have been dominant. The merit of its products, Wine of Cardui and Thorford's Back-Bruch, have been widely recognized and the original advertising methods adopted have excited great comment. The publicity for these medicines does not consist of the catch phrases and extravagant statements, too often employed in advertising to-day, but instead the plain story of experience with the medicines given in the plain language of the people themselves. The following is a fair sample of the thousands of Wine of Cardui testimonials published during the past twenty years.

2088 Eastern Avenue, CINCINNATI, OHIO, May 30, 1922.
I consider Wine of Cardui a most excellent woman's remedy. It is certainly a savior as a "one and regulator." For eight years I suffered with female trouble. I had intense pain in the back and between the legs. I experienced it was unable to stand at times. Medicine did not seem to help me, but after all remedies had failed me Wine of Cardui proved my one great, true friend. What a relief! I experienced it only a few days after I started taking it. I used it faithfully for four months and gradually grew stronger and better. I am now regular in the day and for the night. I feel like a new and blessed-good woman. I certainly wish every sick and suffering woman could know of your blessed medicine, how much pain and suffering it would prevent, and what a difference it would make in thousands of homes where there is sickness and sorrow to-day, if they had Wine of Cardui. It would bring relief and joy instead.

A Dry Cellar.

A damp cellar is an abomination and a menace to health. Cement it yourself, advises the Farm Journal. It will cost you only a few dollars for cement. Once experienced, you wouldn't part with this great comfort and convenience. Smooth the cellar floor, inclining it slightly toward one side and one end if the cellar drain is at one corner. Along this side and end make a shallow, rounded trench. Lay from an inch to an inch and a half of cement over the floor, making the open drain at side and end, as shown in the cut. Any water that now gets into the cellar is at once carried by the open drain to the outlet drain, and there is no mud in the cellar.

The Maltese Milk Goat.

A company is being formed in Malden, Mass., to establish a Maltese goat milk dairy and sanitarium. It is composed of leading physicians, who want the milk as a remedy for malnutrition and pulmonary diseases, together with business men, who are in it for the profits. They intend to test it by purchasing goats enough to prove its merits. The Maltese goat, like all others, is naturally a browser and not a grazer. He lives on leaves and branches which die for want of nourishment and converts waste and unproductive lands into fertile pastures. A gentleman reports the increased value of his 600 acres of land by the use of a herd of goats as being 10 cents an acre. The Maltese goat has no offensive odor peculiar to the male common goat. The milk has no peculiar flavor. It resembles cow's milk both in taste and color. —Cor. American Cultivator.

Horse Sorel in the Lawn.

"How can a person kill horse sorel from the lawn without killing the grass?" asks an Ohio reader. Try liming it in September. In November or December give a heavy coat of well rotted manure. Next spring rake off any strawy part of the mulch that may remain. The grass will probably grow rank again and crowd the sorrel out. If the roots of the grass are dead, it should be re-seeded, raked over and rolled in October. —Farm Journal.

News and Notes.

A poor outlook for corn is the general verdict for the corn belt.
Public sales will be made a feature of the live stock shows at the world's fair.
Forests are threatened by many enemies, of which fire and reckless lumbering are the worst.
An uneven apple chop, short in the west, though large and of good quality in some regions, appears probable.
Prussic acid is now stated to be the poisonous principle in sorghum, and young plants are said to contain a higher percentage of it than mature plants.
The use of nitrate of soda as a top dressing for wheat, rye and millet is pronounced a desirable and profitable practice by Dr. E. B. Voorhes of New Jersey, who claims that it increases the yield and improves the quality of the crop.
The "Clark" Grass Culture.
Mr. Clark claims that his results in grass growing are obtained by carefully following a well defined system, the more important features of which are thus briefly stated in Rural New Yorker, though other essentials must be considered: First, the most thorough preparation of the soil; no "nurse" crops; second, very heavy seeding with even distribution; third, large applications of chemical fertilizers.

FEMALE WEAKNESS

642 1-2 Congress St., PORTLAND, MAINE, Oct. 17, 1902.
I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pains would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed to be beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came to a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering the agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.

Willhelmina S. Sweeney
Treasurer, Portland Economic League

Periodical headaches tell of female weakness. Wine of Cardui cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. If you are discouraged and doctors have failed, that is the best reason in the world you should try Wine of Cardui now. Remember, that headaches mean female weakness. Secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui today.

WINE OF CARDUI

The Powder Wagon

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

When old Jake Harper left Missouri by the overland trail to make a home on the Kansas frontier, taking along his wife and two children, he knew the risks he ran. He was known as a determined, obstinate man, and one without fear. Perhaps if he had never been drawn into argument over the matter he would not have made a move, but when his neighbors heard that he was thinking of a change, and one after another sought to dissuade him, he sold his farm in Missouri and joined an emigrant train.

It was a clear case of pigheadedness, his going at all, and his taking up a claim right in the midst of the Indian country was nothing short of criminal recklessness. The frontier was dangerous enough, but he was miles beyond it. It wasn't a fortnight before a war party of Indians appeared and attacked. It is a matter of record that the old man and his wife killed six warriors. The children had been killed at the first fire. When the wife received a bullet the husband managed to break through the band and mount a horse and escape, though he was twice wounded.

As soon as his wounds were healed he set out to reap vengeance. He wandered over plain and prairie, he hid among the hills, he paddled up and down the rivers. He moved mostly by night, and not a week went past that he did not tally at least one. He killed Wounded Bird, Little Buffalo and Red Sun—three prominent chiefs. In one year he killed thirty-four Sioux warriors. He waylaid them by day and crept into their villages at night, and Gray Eagle offered twenty ponies for his capture dead or alive. In a way he was a great protection to the frontier. If a raid was contemplated and it was discovered that "The Shadow," as the red men called him, was aware of it the affair was abandoned.

Old Harper's deeds of boldness were counted by the score, but perhaps the boldest was entering a village on the Republican river one night during a thunderstorm. He made use of knife and tomahawk alone and killed five men and two squaws. When the alarm was finally given he hid behind trees and warwams until he had shot down six more warriors, thus making his score thirteen. The fact that no Indian dog would bark at him and thus give an alarm was greatly to his advantage. One night he got among a herd of ponies and cut the throats of forty-eight of them. During the two years that he ran loose, as it were, he killed nearly 100 Indians, set fire to and destroyed four villages and caused the death of about seventy ponies.

This record would have satisfied the vengeance of most men, but Harper felt that things were going too slow. He had also figured it out that he had little to live for, and he determined on a grand coup. He had trapped for furs while wreaking vengeance, and one day he appeared at a frontier town with about $250 worth of choice skins. He also had a pony loaded down with plunder taken from the Indians. All his goods were taken off for powder in kegs and a two horse outfit. There were over 200 pounds of the powder. Before driving away Harper stated to a friend that he was going to kill a hundred Indians at once, but did not give particulars. He joined a body of emigrants and continued with them until well into the Indian country and then cut loose. He left the party at night and drove off at right angles to the trail, and no one but the Indians ever saw him again.

A Sioux chief named White Bird was abroad with a war party numbering 200 bucks. They had heard of the emigrant party and were going to take the trail ahead of them when they came upon old Harper. His wagon stood in a grove of cottonwoods, and his horses were grazing. He had dug a rifle pit under the wagon, and as soon as the Indians came within range he opened fire on them. At that time but few red men had rifles. The old man not only stood the party off for two hours, but killed four and wounded six. Then they rushed him, which was just what he planned for. At a given signal the party dashed forward on their ponies, and in two minutes the old man was dead. Every one gathered close in to see what plunder the wagon contained, and they were tearing the cover off when a tremendous explosion occurred. According to the Indians it shook the earth for miles around. Of the war party sixty were killed outright, ten crippled for life and thirty burned and otherwise injured. Over seventy ponies were also killed.

It was the heaviest blow ever suffered by the Sioux tribe, and it resulted in a treaty with them that was observed on their side for the next five years with the utmost fidelity. The body of the old man disappeared in the explosion, and the Indians figured it out that his "medicine" had preserved him to take still further revenge. It was years before they would give up that he was dead. Up to the time of Custer's death there were still among the followers of Sitting Bull about twenty warriors who were present at the explosion, and several of them were blind of an eye or had suffered in their limbs. Sitting Bull himself was not there, but he was carrying a piece of wood from the shattered wagon as a charm against any further tragedies of the sort. He lost this in his battle with Custer, and from that time on he was plunged in despair and predicted that his end would soon come. His second chief, Rain-in-the-Face, was in the rush against the wagon, being then out with his first war party, and he had two ribs broken by a flying fragment.

SWEET POTATOES.

An Evaporated Product That Keeps Well and Bears Transportation.

A recent bulletin of the South Carolina experiment station calls attention to the fact that, while sweet potatoes may be produced in abundance at small cost and furnish a cheap, nutritious and palatable food not only for man, but for domestic animals, they have fallen far short of the full measure of success as a market crop because, first, they are too bulky to pay for extended transportation, and, second, they cannot stand rough handling and exposure to freezing weather.
The station, therefore, undertook to find a method by which the potatoes might be dried, with an improvement of the keeping quality and no loss of edible quality. After numerous experiments it believes that those results may be obtained by boiling the potatoes in an open kettle and drying in a fruit evaporator. The method followed at the station was as follows:
By means of a derrick used in the cannery several bushels of green potatoes were lowered in an iron basket into a large boiler in which the water was heated by steam. To secure uniform cooking the roots should be nearly of the same size. Those weighing from one to two pounds required an hour for thorough cooking. Six to eight hours were required for evaporating them at a temperature of 150 degrees F. An ordinary laborer peeled and sliced a bushel per hour.
The evaporated product, it is claimed, "will keep for an indefinite time and bear transportation to any part of the world at any season." It contained: "Moisture, 8.42 per cent; crude ash, 2.48 per cent; crude protein, 5.06 per cent; crude fat, .50 per cent; crude fiber, 2.08 per cent; nitrogen free extract, 86.10 per cent. To prevent hardening of the product it should be packed in close boxes as soon as practicable after removal from the hot room."
To prepare the product for table use "soak the slices in warm water for an hour and prepare as dressed or candied potatoes. The desiccated potatoes may also be used as are the fresh roots for puddings or custards." For the latter purpose they may be quickly prepared by adding a small amount of warm water and boiling. Not more than fifteen minutes will usually be required.

SHERRY.

One of the prettiest social events known in the history of Sherry was the wedding of Mr. Thomas Becker and Miss Flossie Cline. The marriage ceremony was held in the Presbyterian church Wednesday Sept. 23, at six o'clock p. m. and was conducted by the Rev. Otto of Vesper. The bride looked exceedingly pretty in a gown of white silk mull and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. The bridegroom was attended by Miss Amelia Iverson, also dressed in white, as bridesmaid and Mr. Walter Cline as best man. Hazel Parks and Irene Kelley acted as flower girls and carried baskets of flowers which they strewed before the bride as she was leaving the church. The reception was held at the home of the groom's parents where an elegant banquet was served to all the guests after which they retired to the ball room and enjoyed a lively hop. There were about 250 guests present. Those from out of town were: Mrs. Harrison Woodworth, Miss Grasshorn, Miss Eddy, Mr. Voyer, Junction City, Mr. Eddy, Mr. C. ## Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications as they can't reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a humming sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever, unless cases of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous lining.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

School Savings Banks.

In 1885 a school-savings bank system was inaugurated in this country. Its object was to train school children to thrift. Since then the movement has been remarkably successful as the eighteenth annual report of the system shows.

The plan requires but a word of explanation, as its operation is exceedingly simple. A school board desiring to introduce the system has only to secure the co-operation of a local savings bank to handle the weekly deposits. These are handed to the teacher at a fixed time each week and the deposit credited to the pupil on his card.

The latest report shows a total of 797 schools at present using this system, distributed through eighty-five cities in twenty-one states. In the eighteen years of its history a sum of $2,138,747.57 has been saved. Of this there has been withdrawn $1,616,780, leaving $521,966 subject to call next January. The largest total deposit is that of New York, $854,147. Long Island City, where the organization originated, has $151,432 on its record; Pottstown, Pa., $114,185.

The systematic organization is due to J. T. Thirty of Long Island City, who issues this eighteenth annual report.—New York Sun.

No danger of consumption if you use Foley's Honey and Tar to cure that stubborn cough.

CRANMOOR.

Mr. McGovern of Rochester, Minn., who has spent the summer here died Saturday morning at the home of his daughter Mrs. James Gaynor after an illness of several months. Mr. McGovern was 80 years of age and was a hale, hearty man till a fall some three years ago fractured a hip since which time he has been confined to his room and home. During the past summer and while at his daughter's the rupture of a blood vessel in the head and a stroke of paralysis was the beginning of his last sickness which terminated fatally Saturday morning Oct. 3rd. The remains were followed to Elm Lake station Monday morning by the family and a large concourse of sympathizing friends and accompanied to Rochester Minn. for interment by Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Gaynor, Mr. Thos. and Miss McGovern, children of the deceased. Mr. John McGovern the only other son lives on the home place at Rochester.

Another destructive fire visited the Ann Skeel marsh property during the early morning of Saturday burning up an entire bunding and 400 new barrels which were stored therein. The origin of this fire is unknown but is supposed to have taken fire by the carelessness of some tramp or unknown individual. The building had not been occupied since picking time and was used as a storage room for the Skeel and Fitch cranberry barrels.

How to Make Sponge Molasses Candy.

Boil together a cupful of molasses, one of brown sugar and a tablespoonful each of butter and vinegar. When a drop hardens in cold water remove from the fire, beat in a small teaspoonful of baking soda, beat hard as long as you can make the spoon move, then pour into a buttered pan.

How to Keep Tools Bright.

"For keeping tools bright and free from rust when out of use," says the Medical Times, "brush them with a preparation made by stirring enough red or black mineral paint into crude petroleum to make the mixture of the consistency easy to spread. This can be applied with a brush made of a piece of sheepskin tanned with the wool on or with any ordinary brush. It will prevent rust and may be rubbed off readily, leaving the face of the tool perfectly bright."

How to Clean Bottles and Decanters.

Cut up some raw potato (or the peels will do) and put it into the bottle with a little soapy water. Shake the bottle till it is clean, then empty, rinse it thoroughly in clear water and drain till dry.

How to Make Pineapple Pickles.

Slice the pineapple very thin and pour over a syrup made of two pounds of granulated sugar to a pint of vinegar, with spices of cloves, cinnamon and allspice. The next morning drain off the syrup, boil up again and pour over the fruit. Repeat this twice again. Ripen muskmelon, ripe cucumber and watermelon are pickled in the same manner. The rind is cut in thick oblong pieces and the outer skin shaved off.

How to Stop Blood Flowing.

To stop blood flowing from a cut on the hands first burn a newspaper, then apply the black dust to the wound, when the skin will heal up instantly.

How to Make a Belt.

An extremely useful belt is made of black satin ribbon, about three inches wide and tied in a little bow to the right side. The ends of the ribbon are turned up two or three inches and stitched at the sides to form little pockets, one end being the length of the pocket longer than the other. The pockets are used for the handkerchief, car fare and small articles.

Fall colds are liable to hang on all winter leaving the seeds of pneumonia, bronchitis or consumption. Foley's Honey and Tar cures quickly and prevents serious results. It is old and reliable, tried and tested, safe and sure. Contains no opiates and will not constipate. Johnson & Hill Co.
